The recent depression in exchange is due in a great degree to the sudden influx nd forced sale of Southern bills which it was difficult to place in the Southern markets. At New Orleans there has been of late a very heavy supply of bills offering and a very restricted demand, and hence the tendency towards lower figures which has prevailed there. Sterling bills are reported to have sold as low as 103% for gold; but on the 6th inst, bill of lading bills were quoted at 146 a 147 for currency.

The money market continues easy at six per cent, with a moderately light demand from the Stock Exchange. Loans on government securities are in most assumes made at the per cent. The discount line is dul and rates are unchanged. In remarking upon the deposits in the bank statement yesterday, we wrote that it was difficult to account for the change, "except by a derical error," &c. The sense of this was altered in

The conservative and common sense view of the curmey question taken by the President, as shown in his ecent speech to the Virginia delegation, is not without ct in dissipat ng the host of vague and needless apprehensions which have filled the popular mind since the "Fort Wayne speech" of Mr. McCulloch. This last the "Fort Wayne speech" of Mr. Methalloch. This last has been the keynoto of all the arguments of the bear in gold and stocks aline it delivery, and it has been used with considerable success. But it is high time that the deceptive talk of the redical contractionis should be taken for what it is torth, and no more. The Secretary of the French of the Treasury knows probably as well as any other well informed person that he will remain powerless to contract the currency and the twelve hundred millions of floating obligations of the government are funded or redeemed. The upport calls for contraction and a result of the probable of the purpose of the state of the purpose of the state of the probable success. But it is high time that the deceptive talk of the rediction and a result of the reduction of the probable success to the public of specie payments which some of the public journals are making are only calculated to misley disease. The state of the study of the public of specie payments which some of the public journals are making are only calculated to misley disease. The study of the public of the publi has been the keynote of all the arguments of the bears in gold and stocks since its delivery, and it has been used ary 1 was $423,902,225, and the total, including interest-bearing currency, $612,451,264. Only the non-interestbearing legal tenders calculate freely, and how, with four, or even three bundred millions of national bank notes in circulation, can the amount of legal tenders be materially reduced will out seriously embaroussing these national banks, and in many cases forcing them into liquidation? For if legal tenders became scarce their notes would fall to a discount, and speculative brokers would buy them up in large amounts and present them all at once for payment. The national banking system is the weakest element in our mancial system, as time will doubtless prove. But in view of the Impossibility of contracting the currency for two or three years at least to come, why so much impant talk and railing about it and the return to hard cosin. If it assisted us at all in working our way back to a resumption of specie payments it would answer some useful purpose; but at present it merely assists in districting popular attention, interrupting the natural course of business, and making a harvest of greenbacks for the speculators for a fall, the depression produced being at the same time only temporary and productive of no good to the people at large. The somer that all public officials and journalists view the

The Boston Traveller of yesterday says:—

The money market is well supplied with capital, which is easily obtained on approved collaterate by berrowers in good standing, both from banks and individuals, at six per cent, if returnable on demand or a ter short notice. On longer time the common rate is seven and three-tents, but more is paid on fluctuating piedges. The discount market is inactive, but the best endorsed notes are in request at seven and eight per cent, while the inferior grades are less easily passed at from nine to twelve.
